*“Elevates the museum experience
through thoughtful, creative application of materials and texture”*

The interior designers worked closely with the museum to develop the narrative sequence that explains the co-evolution of butterflies and plants. The firm also worked with the architects responsible for the Pavilion's caterpillar-like shell structure, to ensure efficient visitor flow along with seamless integration of displays and environmental support systems. This project was praised for its amazing use of scale – with its oversize illustrations, live plants and butterflies, the space brings you down to the scale of an insect.
